

From: Walmart.com Recalls
Sent: Sunday, November 24, 2019 7:47 PM
Subject: Withdrawal of Various Romaine Products

Dear Valued Walmart Customer:

We have been notified that the Food and Drug Administration (FDA), Center for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), and various state health authorities are investigating an outbreak of illnesses caused by E. coli O157:H7. Data and laboratory evidence indicate that romaine lettuce from the Salinas, California growing region is a likely source of this outbreak. Upon this advisory, consumers are advised to discard all products containing romaine lettuce grown in Salinas, California.

Although a formal recall has not been declared, out of an abundance of caution, we are sharing the relevant information with all potentially impacted customers.

Our records reflect that you may have purchased one or more of the below items.
